

crazy they are. And there's a lady named Emma Beecher (or Beechy). She told me that. She was with those bad peoples. There where we went to work. They're crazy. And she said, 'We're carzy peoples over here. We don't get sick.' I said, 'Why?' She said, 'We kill each others ourselves. We're married to another man--get another man --another wife. We just swap wife and husband. See how crazy we are!' And I said, 'You're crazy--you got--' 'No, I'm too crazy. I don't want get married.' That's the way she told me. I'm scared of them, And the office they told us not to go around the camps. They camping. Yeah. They don't have--they don't live like this.* They don't live like that. It's funny. If you go over there, you be surprised. At winter time one time was going to Gallup. At Christmas time. Early in the morning we start to go on the road. And on the roadside a tent was--a little tent was set by the road. Oh, the snow was on the ground and it covered--we was going to Gallup. And there's two mens under there--they were outside. They got a fire built up. They're cooking outside. That's the way they do over there right now, too. And they don't dress up like we all. They bad! That's why the white people don't like the Utes and Navajoes over there. She know it. They don't eat in the hotel or restaurants. Now, we're eat in hotels. That's how we went to Gallup. They know us. Now we eat in hotels. And this white man came early. And he's selling jewelry. He said, 'You ought to buy this kind.' Paul's cousin gave me these two but I broke one of them. It's getting old and it broke off here. They make them.

* Eugenia lives with her daughter and family in a comfortable house in Anadarko.