

see them things just full but they don't get drunk. Well-to-do business men and big government workers, they come out of those offices and go in the lounge and sit there maybe with a glass. I don't know what's in there. They sit there and sip it a while and talk and talk, and then away they go. You hardly ever see a drunk man there. In the hotel we used to stay in, it was just about a block from the Federal Bureau of Investigation's headquarters. Lots of the workers from various places. They had a big lounge there in the Harrington Hotel. That thing was always full. But you don't see anybody stagger around. Ladies come in there, too --well-dressed ladies. They get a drink and away they go. Of course I don't know about the skidrow part of the town--it's so big.

INDIANS IN CLINTON SCHOOLS

(How do the young Indians today get along in the public schools here?. Do quite a few of them finish high school?)

I think this year--or last year--they had just one. Just one girl finished at Clinton High (Indian student). But before there used to be three or four that would finish. But they began to drop off, drop off. Now I don't know how many are in high school now. Just don't have no idea. But it seems to me like most of the parents now are keeping the kids in school. And I always think pretty strongly that them kind is going to go through. And not all the parents are that way. Yes, my son and daughter both finished high school here in Clinton.

(At the time your son was a student here were there other Indian students--more than today?)

Yes, yes. See, he finished a year before his sister did. That's our daughter's picture there--our son had it made overseas. Some
