

Them cards. They don't play another game. I don't know about cards. I just don't know.

(Did he play with other Kiowas?)

Sures. Kiowas and Comanches. Apaches. And Wichitas and Caddoes and Delawares. White peoples. Everybody plays. But when this land was opened, the Agent stop it. The government stop it. And see, now, they don't play, no. Way back they used to have a reservation. They could do anything what they please. When the land was opened, we have sections (allotments?). Now everybody stop. This time nobody can't gamble like that. No.

(Why did the Agent stop it?)

Nineteen hundred.

(Why did he stop it?)

I don't know. I can't tell you. I'm too crazy. I don't know.

(Where did the men go to play cards?)

Anywhere. I don't never see them and I don't know.

(I just wondered if they would play in their own tipis or if they went somewhere else.)

Outside, I guess. Sometime maybe they put big canvas in. Maybe they make lots of room. They play in there. That's what I heard. I never did see them.

(Did they play for money?)

They play for money.

(Did your father win?)

Sure, he win.

(Did his always win or did he ever lose?)

I was little. I can't--I don't know. I just know he go to gambling. When
