(Do you remember any particular times he had to arrest anybody?)

No, I just don't know. I was little and I don't remember anything.

SCHOOL EXPERIENCES, METHVIN INSTITUTE

(Tell me about--when you went to school. How old were you when you went to school?)

Thirteen.

(How did you happen to go to school?)

Well, the government got to make a request. Send your children go to school. Kiowa, or, and they do it. The children have to go to school. They got to learn them Indians something. Maybe they tell them--and my mother and my step-daddy think it's good way. Then they put us in school. Then we learn something. And I don't know about the camp or--I don't know. We stay in the school. That's all I know.

(What school did you go to?)

Methodist school. Mission school. This is where they have big school up here--they call it Kiowa School. It's government school. Lots of growing boys and girls go school there. But they stop that government school and they make another one at Rainey Mountain. That's where they go. And J. J. Methvin got the church school. That's a good school up there to learn how to pray and learn everything. And see, that's where I go. That's how come I begin to Christian when I was little girl. And I'm still going. All the Methodist children; some of them are preachers. Albert Horse, preacher. Guy Quoetone, he's a preacher. Jack Botone-- See, everyone--Methvin--J. J. Methvin school students, they're all good. They're all Christian people.

(Did you go to the Methvin school?)
