

real cold you still got to go out and call for them four times. They can come in here and warm and still get out there and go through this four times. And the fourth time he'll come in--they'll go through this way, and then they'll eat.

(Did you ever hear how the "Bowstrings" got the name, "Bowstrings"--or what that means?)

Yes. They were called himataenohis --that means "bow." That's the string of--a "bowstring of an arrow". That's what they're named after. ho' nihiot' xeyo' --"Wolf Clan." They were known as the "Wolf Clan." The Bowstring Clan was known as the Wolf Clan. ho' ni- means "wolf."

(How did they come to be called "Bowstrings?")

No, I never did hear that.

(When they went to war, did they have any special duties as far as going to war is concerned?)

No.

SIDE B

INSTRUCTION OF NEW MEMBERS AND TALKS BY ELDERS

(--those Bowstrings--would their parents have to give anything away at that time?)

No. They don't have to.

(How would a man get to be a Doorkeeper?)

Well, my father used to tell these little boys, "If you join any kind of clan you will get to know many things that maybe your parents don't know and they can't teach you and they can't tell you." He said that after they sat around and before they ate, one of the elderly men was appointed: "Now you talk to our little brothers."
