

Mr. Byrd: They have a big celebration there. And they offer a burnt offering sacrifice which they did used to believe, alright. And the Israelites and all them - in other words, God's chosen people. Before they began to do that and even, I don't know really just when it begin, but as far as the Bible mentions it at the time when Cain and Abel, Adam's boys they offered sacrifice. That's really when it beginning of it. But then the burnt offering - it is from Abraham, I believe. And then the Kee-too-wahs, they still doing that. They don't know it's been abolished. That was abolished when Jesus Christ was hung upon that torture tree. The Bible mentions that. And they still go ahead and do that just because they don't read the Bible.

(Did many of the Indians have to find new homes when they built this Hudson Lake?)

No. Well, I guess most of them did. Even white people too. Tom here, he was talking to them and his house is right in there where the lake is now. And then all down the lake there where the lake is now. And then all down the lake there they was good farming people. Farm and then on that way to the creek. I believe there was mostly white people lived along the river there.
