

startin' up these drive-ins. We drove in and we'd have our Oklahoma Tag on car and a girl would nudge another and say, "You think I want to wait on Okies?" Oh, that'd burn me up, you know. Sometime I well, all my life I heerd about factories and how people live. So, we, my husband was in the army at this time. He was stationed at Ft. Dix. And we lived there in Bristol. So, I decided I'd take a factory job. And first thing you know, everybody begin asking questions, you know. And one old fellow, well he not so old, about 65, he was hep on this cowboy and Indian stuff and he wanted to know if they still have hitchin' rails and thing like that, you know, in Oklahoma. And I thought, well, you know, I got some real good dirty digs out that Oklahoma stuff. So I thought I'd just fix 'em. I said, "For heaven sake, no." "Don't ever go down there and let people know you're ~~that~~ dumb." I said, "They round those cows up with helicopters and jeeps." He said, "How they brand them?" I said, "Oh, they got a guy. He drives the jeep and they got a thing they fasten on for the spark plugs in that heats the branding iron and they got an old boy, he stands up in back and he ropes the cow and snubs it to the car and gets out and takes his brand and the (--) and I know of only one town in Oklahoma that still has a hitching rail and I don't know the name of that town. But it's out in the Panhandle. And they still have a hitching rail in that town. Have you ever been out there? Go out there some time. You might learn a lot of things, I can't tell you. I know the bus that runs from there. I believe I was coming back from Oregon, layover there. And this hitching rack was still there.

KINDERGARTEN IN DRUMRIGHT:

(What about this Kindergarten?)

This is the first kindergarten that was in Drumright, Oklahoma. See.

It's wrote on there. Now this little lady teaching the kindergarten
