

know them.

(Roy: Her's grandfather's father, you mean that?)

(No, I mean her own grandfather.)

(Yeah, Ma, you seen your own grandfather--you use to live with him.)

Yeah, I done told her already that my grandfather at Cement --

(Roy: You use to live with them.)

(Did your grandpa live at Cement?)

Yeah, I was raised over there.

(Roy: It's right there where that stop sign, stop light, you been through there. At the corner there, southwest, that's their place.)

(Is that where you were allotted your land?)

I was raised over there at Cement. You know where that big hill?

(Roy: This is her allotment right here.)

(Oh, this is right here?)

(Roy: She's got another one east of town, too. And some around Cement.)

I was raised in Cement when I was --

(How did your folks come to live around Cement?)

I don't know.

(Roy: How come you all live over there. Somebody said you all move over there a long time.)

Yeah, long time. My grandpa, they just move over there, I guess. He's got land in town.

(Roy: That's about a mile south. You go southwest. You know where the nursery is down there? I guess you seen it--about a mile and half, mile and quarter. They got a place right there, you know, adjoining--he used to live on the south side of the road there. He had a big cellar-like, you know, just covered with dirt. That's where they lived. That's their place, right there. About a mile west of Cement.)

(Where were your mother and your father, where were they allotted their land?)

(Roy: Right there at Cement. That's where they got it. They got two places. The one right there in town and one a mile west of town. That's your mother's there west of town, isn't it Mom?
