

I remember Glass all right.

J. A. Tyner: She got that school out at Mount Pryor, and she was teaching out there awhile and finally got sick and finally they got me, wanted to know if I'd go out and take over her school for awhile. And so I went out there and those kids in arithmetic, when they come to a problem that they couldn't work, well, they said they'd take it to Miss Glass and ask her to help 'em on that problem. Oh, she said "If you all can't work those problems" she said "I'll put you back to the first of the book so you can work them." So she put them back to the first of the book where it was easier for them.

(Laughter) They had already been through that part of the book you know.

Ed.: In those little schools the kids were all sizes. You couldn't do very much but just her them like buffalo.

WORE UNIFORMS AT THE SEMINARY - STRING BAND ORGANIZED

(At the old National Seminary, didn't they have uniforms for the students that went there?)

J. A. Tyner: Yeah. We didn't wear our uniforms all the time did we? Just when we had to go for drill. Company A and Company B, two classes. Jack Brown he was the captain of B and his brother George was the Captain of C-- no A..

(Did they have a band? Music?)

Music? No just string band. I remember Fred played the guitar, and I played the violin and mandolin some, and that was the old jazz band and Thompson, you remember Walter Thompson? His wife was a musician. She had piano there. Mrs. Wolfard would play some. So Thompson, he took the notion that he was going to have an orchestra. He organized and got those three women and Felix Ross on the bass fiddle, bull fiddle and got me to play second fiddle for him. He played the fiddle too, Thompson did. So we had us an orchestra. And one time we was going to have some entertainment over at Tahlequah in the old
