

them soldiers up there. They fight a whole lot. All the time. Then this waiting, waiting for burs to bring the ammunition that we need. When some- finally - we hear one of these - these a camp we could hear the guns, the fighting we could hear the guns going off all the time. Everybody is- kneeling down and pray for their fighting men. So they fighting men. So they just kept going, kept going and finally, there was fighting going on, everything stop over there. You don't hear the gun go off anymore. Just as long as gun going they fighting they pray. But when the guns, you don't hear the guns anymore, well they all get up and do their war song then. Then when these men coming back, there was one time I seen them there was two men come back. Two men got killed, two men got killed there, just about between times, we hear the guns. We had the guns right here and a little ways we hear the guns. That means somebody being killed. So they know something wrong. When they coming back - why, the first man coming they bring them on a horse back. On a white horse, man sitting behind he lays down on the front the horse, you could see the blood all over them horses, on the sides. Then the next ones - the bay horse - and a dead man - bring him in. Then they come over here. Then the next man come in here, running to the camp, running to the camp was a Navajo old man, then his wife down there. But he's wife is Warm Spring Apache, he's a Navajo. So when this man come in there this old man sitting over there, why he shot him down about twice, he killed that old man. So that's the way the done. Then the same day they took those, dead man out in the mountains. They always buried - they looking for caves already caves somewhere, so just close that with a rock. Put it in there, put in lots of blankets and cover it up and everything. Fix it good. Then leave that way. That's all they do that. They don't have to dig or something like that. Just already look, cave that's what they looking for. If find it, they put that man in there. Then the old what's this man got killed, what he owns,
