

(Pine box.)

Pine boxes something like that. Wrapped him up in cloth, blankets and put him in there and bury them that way. It wasn't modern like it is today.

(Did they have any sort of special ceremony or feast days back there for them?)

No, I don't think they done very much like that, anything, very much back there.

They just wanted to put away the body as quick as they can, because--

(There wasn't any way of embalming them days?)

No. Body began to--

WENT TO CHILOCCO SCHOOL IN 1917 - LIFE THERE

(When did you go to Chilocco?)

Uncle Fenton sent me to Chilocco in 1917.

(That was Fenton Antelope wasn't it?)

Yeah, Fenton Antelope. And I went to school there seven years and he told me "Don't you run off." He said "I sent you to learn something." And boy let me tell you the first year was rough. I use to cry every evening.

(Homesick?)

Homesick, yeah, when I get home. So I wrote to my uncle one day and I say, "I want you to come back after me."

(What kind of life did you have up there? What did you do, what the school teach you, what activities did you have?)

Well, the--we, just like any other school, we study history, arithmetic, literature, grammar.

(What kind of discipline did they have? Did they have any trouble with the students back in the early days?)

Well, there was just--there wasn't very much at that time they didn't have too much trouble with the students.

(Did you wear uniforms?)

We have to wear uniforms, every Sunday and we have to--just like it was just
