

you want to be, you got to work at it...I set a goal for myself, I wanted to be a corporal, I wanted to be a sergeant, that was my goal. Then after I got out of the army, another thing I learned in the army was you have to do something to earn your money. I always had my money when I was in the army. I got used to it. I just thought when I got home, didn't have a job... I'm not used to being broke. I thought the only way I'm going to have money, well, I got to work for it. And I better start looking out how am I gonna do it since I got out of the army. I just thought, well, I'm gonna try this civilian life for awhile. If I don't I'm gonna go back in the army. Then I just thought again I'm gonna have to start all over again, from a buck private on up. If I go back in I'm goin' to stay in 'til I retire. Then after I got out of the service, I went to school with one white boy there, he was running the cleaning shop when I got out. 'Course he was a close friend of mine. And I used to go down and visit him. And he say why don't you stick around, we'll show you how to press and everything. And the kid that worked for him had quit, and he said here's an opportunity for you. I'll give you a job, I'll use you a little at a time. Just mess around here, learn how to do this a little bit, eventually you'll learn. All right, well, they was having a big pow wow and some people, well I got married in the meantime, and some people, my in-laws wanted me to drive for them to Montana, they was having a big doings over there. And that one night I laid in bed just wondering, now I can take it easy and drive my in-laws over there and enjoy myself, or I can stay here and miss the pow wow and learn a trade. And then the difference
