

just as good as the other person. Just like the oldest boy, the one that's a senior, he has a speech impdeiment, but that never has bothered him. It is a little noticeable...but we don't say anything about it. He's excelled in all sports and he carried plays in with his speech impairment. He carries plays in, almost every play, football playing or something. And that's one reason he don't want to go to college. He's made straight A's in carpentry and he wants to take carpentry. We went around and talked to carpenters and stuff. And one contractor, got the word from one of his teachers that he was good, and he told him he'd hire him this summer. And rather than try to push him if he don't want to go to college. He's big enough to know what he knows. If he don't want to go to college, well, that's a pretty good trade, and I've found out if I try to push him to something that he don't want to be, he'll be all lost there. He wants to be a carpenter, well, let him be.
