

Just around the neighborhood. No, they lived--the school--they just lived around the neighborhood. No, they lived-- close.

(Kinda of a day school?)

Yeah, there's quite a few of 'em that went there.

(How did you like the food?)

Well, the food was, aw'right course, some of the cooks wudn't too good. I didn't put much faith in it. Some cooks, was good some wudn't. Just different ones, you know.

(Was it pretty much like a military school, then, you said you drilled the boys?)

Yes, uh huh, yeah.

(You know, I went to Chilocco when I was in the 7th and 8th grade and they--we drilled them. We had--it was organized by compaines.)

Well, they drilled of a moring.--If I didn't drill e'm somebody else would.

Course that was my job, you know, sometime I'd let somebody else put 'em through.

(How old were you when you were there, about how old?)

Well, I don't know. Might have been 15 or somethin' like that. Maybe a little older.

(Then you came back home when you left?)

Then I came back home and I went to school at Boswell, went to school there. And we used to have school over here at---You know where, you know where that at over here?

(No.)

Used to be--well in territory days used to be a court ground. Court house and jail and everything. Had court there. And I went to school over there. About two or three years.

(What kind of school was that?)

Huh?

(What kind of school was that? Who--who payed for the school?)

Well, it's just like these now. The town paid for it.
