

being bewitched. And another thing, I can heal any kind of disease or ailment that happen. I am possessed with all kinds of healing powers." He says, "Well, whenever our tribe needs doctor or medicine man, I'm the one to cure them. I possess all kinds of powers-- under-the-water power. Headquarters is over at Devil's Lake where my father is." After he come out of there everyone else came over to give him a bear hug--relatives--and care for him and feast. And he was a big medicine man. Cured all kinds of ailments--'bout as sick as some kind of disease..(End of side A) He lived there for years and years. One day--that's all the recreation. Those the Kiowas had. Summer time they would go out, the woman shinny game--like man's football or something like that. Everybody turn out. It happened that one day while they was out there playing a game, somebody heard those whooping cranes again, shooing over (unintelligible word)-- and they looked up there and said, "There they are!" They said, "They're way up there, circling around. That Apache man sitting there he said, "Wait a minute! Wait a minute! They are talking to me." Whooping. And he listened. "Well I have to tell you all. And it's too bad," he said. They come back after me and I have to go to my daddy. Go back to his home--where--Devil's Lake. My father has senf for me to come home." He said, "There's a terrible epidemic coming among our people. It's a plague. Going to go among our people, and he said that I don't know how to cure that plague. You must come back and learn to take care of that plague before I could be (unintelligible word)--"No! We can't let you go." Nobody wants him to go. "We can't let you go. You can't go. You can't go." "Yes,"
