

the creek to get me some--hunting wild berries to eat. Where are you going?" "I'm going goind hunting you up." "Why?" "I heard a lot about you. I heard you are a bad cheater--swindler. I want you to try your luck on me. I wonder if you could swindle me out of something. I want you to try. Is that so, that you could cheat a man out of his very hide?" "Yes, Yes." "Well, let's see you try it on me. See if you can take something away from me, I want--I heard a lot about you and I want you to try." "All right. I can't do it just now because I haven't got my medicine with me. I haven't got my cheating medicine with me and if I had it here with me I could use it on you. But I left it at the camp." Well why don't you go get it? Where is your camp?" Way over there. See them blue hills--mountains over there? That's where my camp is. My tipi." "Well, let's go get it. You try it on me." "I'll tell you what I'll do--if you really want me to cheat you, you wait here. Loan me your ponly or your burrow" He had a brand new saddle on and a nice new decorated bridle, and big cowboy hat, and boots and spurs--he was well dressed up." If you don't mind loaing me your burro, I'll go get it. You wait here and I'll show you." "All right. Get on it and go get it." So he got off and Uncle Sam got down. He said, "You know what? You know this burro notice the difference the riders and me and you. You're going to have to loan me your spurs--boots and spurs and hat. He noticed the difference and he don't want to go." All right, he pulled off his boots and Uncle Sam put the boots on and put the hat--I want that whpp and those belt and six shooters you got." Give him the belt and six shooters. He started and he pulled.
