

on those pins and she fall over and get it all over, and she can't follow you for a while, and then you will get away." "All right," She done just that. So when she had it all fixed, one day, the bear-girl she--her name was m o e t a n y a l e--that's the bear girl.

(What does that mean?)

Means "Mad girl", I guess. That's what it is.

(How do you say girl?)

~~M-e-t-a-n~~ ^{m-e-t-a-n}. Now she come in there and M o e t a n y a l e says, "Sister, come here. I want a rabbit for my meal." She said, "I want you go go get me a rabbit--fresh rabbit." She didn't have no way to kill a rabbit. A rabbit's fast. If you don't bring me a rabbit you're not going to live any longer. So you better bring me a rabbit." So she went rabbit hunting. She didn't have nothing--I think she carried a tent stob. It had point on the end, at about so long. I don't know how she was going to use it to kill a rabbit, maybe hit it on the head--but she was carrying that as a club. And she creéd, went up the hill--mountain and cried and cried and cried. Finally, sitting up there on the hill side crying and never seeing no rabbit --While she was crying she saw some object moving across the prairie coming towards her, coming closer and closer, After while they came--it was some young men riding horseback. They had been on a raid somewhere way down in Mexico--he was coming home. It happened that two or three of them were her own brothers. She was crying and "What you crying about?" She told them, "M o e t a n y a l e has gone crazy and turned into bear and has doen swallered the whole village and now she's in there. She's hunting a way so she could kill me. And she said for me to go get a rabbit for dinner for her. What could I do?"

(This story continued and finished on T-22, which is part of the same interview.)