

(Now, who did -- Cephus or Alex?)

No, no. No sir, dey was two young, I guess. Dey went to--dey been going to school. Well, les see. I know that Jackson--

(Was A.M. Seran there at that time?)

No, no nothin said about him then. It was run by Indian all together. Seem to me like there was a white man there, by the name of, ah--

(Mrs. McIntosh: who?)

--it back in de--you member who work in de--ah, you couldn't member that, I don't guess--work in the Trading Co. store across the tracks.

(Mrs. McIntosh: Run the country--?)

Work in there, clerk in there--

(Mrs. McIntosh: No, no--)

(Was Cortland Long here at that time?)

How's that?

(Was Cortland Long here?)

No, no--ah--well, I remember one thing--I'll tell you--his son was the sheriff one time, Mr. Nicholson.

(Nicholson: Twinam?)

No, they were Indian.

(Nicholson: Charley Brown?)

No, they--he was a--his wife cooked the Indian--

(It wasn't Alex Crain?)

No, no, no sir. This was a Indian. They used to live over north there. Why, you'd know him if I'd call his name.

(Willie Factor?)

Yeah, that's the man. He worked there--in the company store.

(Was that about--were they all Indians who worked there?)

Yes sir, yes sir.

(Do you remember, then, when the store was moved to--farther south, yes sir.)

Can't remember what year, no sir, I can't remember what year, but it was a
