

Howard: That's Stewart's father (Stewart Klinekole, now one of the oldest Apaches, J. Jordan 5-5-71) You know Stewart and Houston?

(Yes.) (J. Gilbert McAllister, an anthropologist studied the Kiowa-Apaches in the early thirties. One of his recent publications on them is "The Four Quartz Rocks Medicine Bundle of the Kiowa-Apache." Ethnology, Vol. 4, 1965.)

Howard: Houston is his grandson.

DOMEBO CALENDAR

(Conversation goes back to the calendar)

(Is this where the kids were drawing on it, here--these scribbles?)

Alice: I don't know. Some of the marks are true, but--

(This says "Lie-low elephant" or something-- "egg" (Drawing No. 72)

Howard: Yeah, that's kids' did that. Maybe Alice did that!

Alice: Nah, I didn't have nothing to do with it! (They laugh) I just see it up till the time my mother just--

Ray: Some of those students (O.U. Field School students) took pictures of that whole thing. They had it strung out and they took pictures of it.

(This really sounds good. "Measles" and "Big Payment" (Drawing No. 65), "Big Bow Visits the Utes". (Drawing No. 68))

Howard: Guy would know about that one--about "Measles."

Alice: "Big Bow--" Well, that Big Bow family might know something about that Big Bow visiting the Utes!

Howard: Big Bow (Abel) might know, ain't it? Old Man Big Bow.

Alice: Yeah. That would be his father. Or maybe his grandfather. Abel Big Bow's father or grandfather. This is way back there.

(Did the Apaches ever have anything like this?)

Howard: No. Not that I know of.

NATURE OF KIOWA-APACHE ORAL TRADITION - STORIES

(How did the Apaches keep track of their history--?)
