(Why?)

It involved too much strict rules. Like policy—their policy. You can't get sealous. If you get jealous, you be ridiculed or they make fun of you.

(Like jealous over what—what might they get jealous over?)

Like you—if you see another lady hanging around your husband, you're jealous. You gonna embarass yourself and him, too. And if you're a member of this, it won't work. Supposed to cause you bad luck or something. That's the superstitution involved. Have you ever heard of any cases where people got jealous or something like that anything happened?)

h yeah, there's a lot of them. I couldn't say who or how, but there is some stories bout that. Especially with Atidi's, and manatidi's, and xaltidi's. Each legion or ach society has a rule. They vary. Like if you're a litidi's, you do the opposite.

manatidi s. is direct. grantidi's, they got—they couldn't handle—

Atidi's, they're just normal people. Like infantry or artillery. Just like... hey got similar to this marines, paratrospers, all that. These are practically the ame. That mean the same thing.

Back in those days, did all the adult men belong to the manatidi' e., or did just ertain people-?)

ust warriers, like Frankie, and Wallace and Tom and Charlie. You have to be a veteran o been in here—have actual combat. That's where these ladies should have no part n it. But when they reenganise they put ladies in it. And it's true that a woman in't got no voice in that society. Yet, they're permitted to take part—to dance and ake part in anyway—help out.

Could anybody who hasn't been a member help out in the dancing or singing?)
eah, just that group. That applies to different tribes, like Commanches, Caddoes, ichitas, Cheyennes, and Arapahoes. They come and look on and if they feel like ancing, they can dance. They're welcome. Anybody can dance. I guess it's that way
