

He graduated North Eastern. He is (name not clear) He is pretty good.

(He broadcast in Cherokee language. That's good.)

He gives all the news. All about Viet Nam (rest of sentence not clear)

BOWS AND ARROWS

(Now who made this arrow?)

Holmes Spring might 've made it.

(That's a perfect Indian arrow, now.)

Cornstalk arrow.

(Cornstalk arrow?)

Did you see—(not clear)

(Well no, I don't think I saw it either. Now that's a hunting arrow there.)

Yeah. This is Bois d'arc. I made these myself. Those commercial feathers though. That is just what you call a hunting tin. You know, rabbit tin.

(Well now do the Cherokees here still make their own bows?)

No. I don't—oh there may be one now and then along. But I could sell a car load of 'em if I could continue to make 'em. I can make 'em.

Third Voice: Well I have made 'em but it's been a long time since I have made any. Didn't make this part but I made the rest of 'em.

(What kind of wood is this arrow made out of?)

Bois d'arc. Osage orange and hedge. Osage orange. Ben Pearson called it.

Now there's a lot of that up around Pawhuska up around there—I don't know what it is about that country up there but I know several years biggest deer killed in Oklahoma, killed up there. Look to me like some of that deer woods up there so doggone poor they couldn't live—
