

Joe: Uh-huh. He was chief one time. At that time he was preacher, all he ever been.

(Thompson Euchalada?)

Joe: That's who he was. There was a paper about it but I can read the thing. Course I don't know I'm getting too old, I guess.

Welch: No. A fellow keep his mind a going, then he stay young won't he? ((laughter))

(Did you go to school at Wyandotte?)

Joe: Yeah, no I went to school at Tahlequah. You did too, didn't you? You was there when I was.

Welch: Yeah.

Joe: 1900, when I come up there. 1900.

Welch: George was there, and let's see--Sam Star, you know he was there. You know we could have seen old man Sam. Sam lives there in town. We seen old Sam Star.

Joe: Sam Field, he was there. Yeah, old man Sam still living there.

Welch: I didn't know whether he died or what seem like I thought he'd died.

Joe: The old Sam has been dead several years.

Welch: Yeah.

Joe: And there was four or five of us seminary boys they call us there. There's Sam, Ausley Graves, Joe Monroe.

Welch: Bill Meekes.

Joe Bill Meekes, but these fellows around here. There's another one, I think his name, he lived at Mesa at that time when they was going to school.
