

around. And he's going to show me the weed that they used--I mean he uses to cure snake bite, You know he has the reputation of being one of the best snake doctors there is, down in that county. I've heard lots of people tell about him.)

Let's see, there's another fellow you ought to know.

(Joe Crittenden?)

Yeah, he's somewhere up there.

(You know his boy and I went to Indian school together. Andy.)

Yeah. Did you know Wilson Crittenden?

(No.)

I think that's Joe's brother.

(No, I didn't know him. And George Robins. You knew him?)

Yeah, he died didn't he?

(No. He's still living.)

Bryce is the one--

(Yeah, I saw him in February.)

Bryce is the one that didn't have no leg. He had sugar diabetes.

(Now the last time I was down in that country, I asked about George and--)

Oh George, he's really old.

(Yes. He is. He's eighty-eight.)

I knowed him long time. He lives up this way from Tahlequah don't he?

(Yeah, up there at Lost City. He's got a pretty place out there. It's a little bitty place but it's real pretty up on there.)

About two miles west of Lost City in that land. That's where I was born and raised. I lived there on the prairie, and that old place they use to call Ely, did you come to that?

(Yeah, I know where it is.)
