

wanted to get out of gettin' sentence--sentence too heavy. So he told the sheriff there said, "I'll get the guns told you, I was positive. Said, if you cut my sentence down." So, they agreed to it, and he talked old Cherokee out of that gun. But in the meantime, they came along with a promise of being free, if you would join Roosevelt's Rough Riders. Daddy said a bunch of them did. And they were supposed to have hung Cherokee Bill there. But as long as he was in jail, Cherokee was never hung, and Cherokee disappeared out of that jail about that time. Said, where he went to he didn't know. See, Daddy was sent to Columbus, Ohio and I forgot where they sent Henry Starr to, but anyway they went to jail. So, Daddy always said they never hung Cherokee Bill. See, he was part nigger. (Sentence not clear) He said, on the first house they burned down, he got out and put women's clothes on, and just walked out. And he said on the next one, he walked out with the smoke. He said he got away off down there a little way, and he thought he was safe, I guess, and said he whopped and the United States Marshal saw 'im and he started shootin' down there. And somebody got lucky and hit him on the back of the head. He said he wasn't caring whether they found 'em or not. He said he wasn't scared of 'im. Said he was getting $1.50 a day for him and his horse. He said that was what he was interested in.

End of First part of Side II