BACKGROUND OF INFORMANT:

Guy Quoetone was born October 15, 1885. He is a Methodist minister, now retired and has been active in church work for many years. He is also a student of Kiowa history, having been interested in listening to stories told by the old-timers about life and happenings in the old days. He has written notes and memoranda concerning many of these happenings in recent years; but they are his own composition and from his memory of either viewing them or hearing them from other Kiowas. He has often served in the Indian police and was an interpreter for the surveyors when the country was opened up. At 82, he is alert, articulate and seems to have a very good memory of things in past years. He is hard of hearing and sometimes misunderstands questions or must have them repeated.

Side B is the beginning of another interview, and continues on T-246.

The Domebo calendar is a Kiowa Calendar (year count) owned by Mrs. Alice Domebo Soontay (Mrs. Howard Soontay). It is a long length of canvas with pen and ink drawings in a long row. Some of the drawings are colored with red and green. There are signs for winters and summers and along with each sign a drawing representing some event by which the year is remembered. The sign for summer is either a Sun Dance forked post or a leafy tree. The sign for winter is a leafless tree. The calendar was loaned to the American Indian Institute by Mrs. Soontay in order to try to find out something about it--when and where it was made, by whom, and what the stories behind some of the drawings are. --j. jordan
