

Then I said, "What made you so black?" He says, "Well, I fell in my Mammy's dye pot." ((laughter))

(Well, that's something I've missed.)

FISHING IN EARLY DAYS

We used to fish a lot in summer time, there that old river get big - could see water 8 and 10 feet deep in some places and maybe deeper than that. But that was as deep as we had 'long there. That's right there where that dam is now.

(The Markham Ferry Dam?)

Third voice: (words not clear) "There's another dam for the Indians." And away he went, you know, and down went down there and we got down to the slough before we got to the river - Joe said, "Well, we got to have some (not clear) see if we get into the boat. And he took off his shoes and I got down and took off my shoes and we waded across there and we got into the boat and we went down - I remember seeing fish, that long, great fish. He giggered and I don't remember whether he got any or not, but he giggered at 'em. I think he got one or two.

Mr. Ross: Yes he did - I saw 'em cleaning 'em.

Third voice: Anyway, we got home and (sentence not clear) ((laughter)).

Mr. Ross: (Static interference)...Well, it makes for a good life. (Not clear) ...makes a better life. Some of 'em couldn't get the (word not clear)...they'd get these batteries, you know. ((Much static interference.))
