

Dog Creek--yeah. Well, it's over east of Foyil, to the south.
(South to Washington school.)

Yes. You see then, they stayed around--they get in timbered country. They didn't put their houses out on the prairie much, I guess. Because it was warmer. But I know where the Washington-- I been there I was county head of the women's work. Oh, '30, '31, to '35, along there. Had charge of the sewing down in Foyil and Chelsea, at the school there.

CHEROKEE SEMINARY BURNED APRIL 10, 1887

(Cherokee Female Seminary--first, when did the seminary burn, do you remember?)

Well, the old seminary burnt on the 10th of April, 1887. And my oldest sister, Ida Collins was there at school, at town of Tahlequah. And the Male Seminary, was there. Minister in town would go out from Tahlequah and preach there at these Seminary schools. Then at Easter, course all the ministers deliver the Easter services in the morning, and extra work--why then they went out to the seminary that afternoon. So, you know how they, every once in awhile, the preachers would come along and want to preach. So, this preacher came about noon. And was going to preach that afternoon. In the summer, they always have summer school. Different teachers would take their, their--

(End of Side A. Continue Part II, Side B.)