

(And he told all that that you just told?)

Yes.

(Did he start out with the seven brothers?)

Yes, the seven brothers.

(And you think there's two stories there?)

Yeah, he (Jay) put two stories together. There was three women in there. Three women and their little boy, and then these seven brothers.

It's supposed to be a single woman.

(Now the part that has the monster coming out and eating that girl; did you say you knew it in a different way?)

He didn't eat that girl.

(I mean killing her.)

This boy that killed that girl, he must have killed his sister according to his story. But the other way that we know like Laura (Big Horse) told it, this couple went and lived close to that lake with their two children. That's the way it starts. But him (Jay), he started it with seven brothers.

(Jay Black talks some more in Cheyenne.)

(Birdie asks about Howi shinixiv and if he knows any buffalo stories.)

(Jay talks some more in Cheyenne.)

(End of Tape. See T-264 for more information on Jay's version of these stories and for Birdie's versions.)
