

what was going to be happening to them, or they provided for them in _____ and that's the way I think they should be with the clan.)'

I think it will finally after these things come about. These things come about and they get a clear picture of it, then they gonna see.

(Oh, this I'm going to ask you about Mrs. Lookout. Who was her daddy?

Mrs. Fred Lookout, chief's wife. You know--Julia, who was her dad?)

Julia?

(Mobry was her maiden name.)

Yeah. I think they were. They French people. They're France and I don't know, I think--I heard too, that they were Cherokee. Part Cherokee. That's where, then these Pryor's--they in that too. See that fellow Pryor, maybe he had children. 'Cause that's when I said they were over here, long time and they run this place. There was --Pryor, yeah, he was one, but he's French too, I think. So they mixed in there. I don't know jest who or how they was, how they branch off.

(She had a sister didn't she? Mr. Pryor. Didn't she have a sister?)

She had a sister or, I never did get that--I never did know jest how that was.

But that's one that married this Harry Reddigo's grandmother. That was.

Yeah, she married this old man--they call him Henry Reddigo. You remember him?

(Yes, I remember him.)

That's his wife. I don't know if that's her sister or, aunt or someway they are close. They all from the same immediate family.

(There used to be a woman--I think she lives at Fairfax and she looked a lot like Mrs. a Lookout.)

Ah, that was probably that Mrs. Tallchief they call her. She was, I think she was kinda mixed, I'm not sure. I don't know, she might have been related to these folks.
