

if they pass, will terminate all the Indians. Relieve the government. Talk about termination again, you look it up, see, you know; use the word termination. That what they want. When that happens, well, then we going to have to pay for our education, compete for chance. If you have money then you're going to have to work for it. (Background noise)-- I probably won't be here, I guess, when that happens. (Background interference)-- You're not gaining nothing by dropping out. You're losing more, you got more to gain by staying. (voices interfere)--here again. (not clear)--I don't know what is going to happen to the Indians (not clear)--the next 50 years. Learn how to work, do anything. That's the way I do. Go out, I drive a tractor, make some money, if out of a job then go back to drive a tractor. Learn how to make hay, go out and help with the tractor, make hay. Teach you how make fence, how to ride a horse, brand calves. Well this is remunerative work, ranching, you see. Should learn how to shovel, hoe, hammer, or saw. Indians gonna have to be "Jack of all trades" in order to live. They must be capable. Learn how to do these things. You got a job somewhere, job is ended terminates, well, you can go here and get another, or if your job was terminated, and you need a little more cash, well you can go here, get another job, work for a man for couple dollars a hour. That's what! The white man does. He works, holds down two jobs. (not clear)--work all day, come home, well they got another job. Another thing, when Indians, he gets a dollar, he goes spends it. He's not going--he not going to save it. Man says he give you a dollar, he going to spend just a quarter so he'll have something for tomorrow. Indian--that's what I said, I mean he's got the dollar, he going to blow it all before sundown. 'Course he'll take a dollar and a lot of things with it. So they have things. The Indian is not that way, I don't know why. Wants something, he's going to get it. Like now if he get a dollar like the white boy he get dollar or dime, he save it. Well, he's poor
