

Harry Pratt says: "I want to say something--"

Glenn says: "O.K. That's what we're here for."

Harry speaks, but in such a very low soft voice that he can't be understood well on the tape. Says he's glad to be here, that he feels good, etc.

Then Victor Parton sings. Others sing with him and the women are humming along.

Victor finishes and Nathan "Buster" Brown starts drumming, ready to begin his set of songs, but the tape ends before he gets started. I shut off the recorded a little before the tape ran out in order to put in a new tape and be set for recording in the morning ceremony. So there is about 20 or 30 minutes of blank tape left on this side.
