

(Well, they've just almost quit making --)

That's right-they can't get the corn anymore. Now, I've talkec to Lena, Lena Fish, and Harriet, they's the two oldest girls there of Chilly Fish. See, I used to stay with Chilly Fish and his boys--Yeah, and I worked for Chilly, oh for years and years, broke horses for him and everything, farmed for him. In the wintertime, I'd cut wood. He'd sharpen that knife with that rock, didn't know anything about a file-- didn't know what a file was--he took that rock and he'd sharpen that axe--

(Makes a good whet stone.)

Ooooh, boy and I'd go out there in that timber, we had good timber too, and I'd bat I'd cut from a rick to rick and one half and then Louis he'd help me haul it in, he's the oldest boy.

(Yeah, Louis then Robert.)

Then Robert. We'd haul that wood, you know and we'd just have stacks of wood. And it would go to snowing and we all just sit around the house and have a good time. Lena was the one could cook, make that obusky I mean that cho when she say she gonna cook echo for dinner, we gonna get out there and do some hard work--(laughter)

(She had to cook about a tub to feed everybody, didn't she?)

Yeah, she did, but now she sure made good enough for that whole gang. And I mean we'd eat--we'd just eat like hogs.

(Well, and they have pork and beef--)

We'd have pork, beef and all that kind of stuff--

(And always kept sofky?)

Always kept sofky, sour too, sour it you know. And that what they call--

(How about chudahaga?)

Fry bread, on yeah, that blue bread.

(Sour bread--takleg tooksy?)

Oh, boy have it all like that. They fied it, that little fry bread like that, put (Unin.) in deep greese, it's kinda sour like, you know. Lot of time might lose a
