

(Yeah, water mill there. Let's see, Lonnie Wilhite's wife, Lucinda, they call her Cat. She still living?)

She still living.

(In that log house and her daughter married Jess Christie?)

Christie. I guess he died now.

(Yes. Nice country down there.)

Yeah, it's a nice country, I know. That's Caney Creek. O-o-o- Wee, got lots of fish from there.

(Yeah, lots of fish there.)

Good water, just clear water. (Sentence not clear) That's good country this side of Stilwell. Good water is spring. It's a big spring.

(Over in Illinois River, close to Scraper.)

Yeah, Scraper, that's a big--good spring, too. North of Little Kansas, that's a good spring down there, at Blackfox Hollow. And north, too, that's a little spring. That's a good spring. Never did dry. That's good water.
