

There was a lot of people that were misfortunate.

(That's right.)

That's alright for them to take them, but I didn't think I needed them. And if we had people who do those things today, we wouldn't have a nation in bad shape. Now lots of people get everything they can, and they they're wasted.

(Yeah.)

(Not clear) --been on the job somewhere and he got his leg hurt or something. He was crippled. (Not clear) Well, that was a lot of money then, but he just abused it. He thought he had enough to last a lifetime. Had a large family. A large family. He just used it up in a little while and those well, then the depression came in and boy, he was up against it. I mean he was really in need. They're the ones that really needed commodities. And he could hardly work, and I was thinking about building this farm out here. He said, "I'll build that farm for you." He said "I'll build it and work for a dollar a day." I said, "Do you think you can build it?" He said, "Yeah, I can build it." I said, "Well, I ain't got very much money but I'll give you a dollar and a quarter a day." (Not clear) Well, I had a little wheat; took a load of it up here to the mill up here around South West. I took it up there and had it ground into flour. He said "I'd just as soon have that as anything." So I gave him a fifty pound sack of flour. He took it. Came out all right. Fifty pounds wouldn't last him long but he was willing to work so I just kept selling flour to him. He was just tickled to death. So he went on to Tulsa then looking for something and that's when they had that soup line over there. And he just went to the soup line that morning. They asked "All the Christians stand up." There weren't no Christians standing up. Nobody stood up. (Not clear) come back and he told them, he said, "I see how you get by." He says, "There wasn't a christian man in that soup line."

(Well.)
