

homes out there on the farm. Independent and free. They got chickens and cows and all that. They come to town. But that's all. The rest of them live here and some have moved away--

(Why do they have to come to town?)

Because there's too many heirs on the lands that they formerly lived on. There's no one family allowed to live there without he pay his share of the proportionate, you know, heired-in rights of the others. So it's leased out.

(End of tape)