

(What's the name of that bird in Kiowa?)

Cecil: That bird-- té né gódl. That's a redbird. You know them red birds that--.

(You said it's the kind that stays in the timber?)

Cecil: That bird's place is in the timber.

(Does it have a topknot?)

Cecil: Well, it's have a little--yeah, a little sharp top on its head. It's kind of black somewhere around.

(Around its bill?)

Cecil: Yeah.

STORY ABOUT SAINDAY CROSSING A RIVER INSIDE A BUFFALO

(What about this story of the buffalo, Sainday and the buffalo?)

Cecil: (speaks Kiowa).

(Can you tell that one, Jenny?)

Jenny: Yeah, it's kind of a short story but we'll tell it.

(Okay.)

Jenny: Well it's usually Sainday, he always be everywhere. And he was going along and there was a big river--deep river there, that he couldn't swim through or go through it, cross it.

Cecil: It's something like the Arkansas River, Mississippi River.

It's a awful big river.

Jenny: So he sat there just wondering how he's gonna get across and finally there was a herd of buffaloes coming. I guess they come in kind of a line like that.

Cecil: They always go in lines.

Jenny: And they get their drinks at that river and then he saw one went across, swim you know. Went across. So there was a lot of them herd. You know, big herd of them. So he talked to them. He said, first he said, "Uncle, Uncle." They call him Uncle.
