his grain ground. Later steel burns were installed. We believes that Turnbull installed the steel burns first used in the mill. During worley's swnership of the mill, a newer type flour grinder was added to the grist mill. At one time it was planted to generate electricity with the water power, but this idea never materalized.

In the 1890s John's father ran a country store about half a mile north of mauhillau. This was after the old Keys store at maujillau was closed. The Keys operated a store before the Civil man there, and a banders had a store and postoffice at mauhillau during the 1880s. The original log store still remains, but is not in use. This old store building still has bullet holes in it put there during the Civil mar.

It was during the 1890s that the Ky Carlile home burned on Caney Creek. Ky also had a store there. He rented the place north of "auhiliau and reopened a store. The ramily lived in the store rooms of the new location until John's father built a home.

In recalling early schools of the logos, John says that schools were just beginning to be built and operated at that time. His first school was at Caney School. This was an old log school and was located just outside of the entrance gate to the present Caney Cenetery. Another of the first schools in the courty was at Double Springs, which served Morn area and Rabbit Trap community before other schools were built. Stony Point School on upper Caney Creek seems to be the next of the early day school houses to be built of logs. John says neither the old school teachers or parents of his young school days tolerated any foolishment as is common place in some schools to-day. Any such activity would have been severely delt with, including a whipping as punishment.

There were no doctors in his community in those early days. The nearest trained doctor was at Evansville, Arkansas. Then a doctor was needed someone had to wide that distance on horseback a half-day away, then maybe not find him, and have to wait for him, or go hint for him in the area. Then the Dr. did get to his folks home, other families with sick folks knew of his coming and the Dr. would see about the all, sometimes taking a day or two to make the rounds. I him recalls a time the bickness, and told his father that there was nothing he could do to save her. John's rather, Ky, then turn d to his knowledge of Indian remedies and gathered routs and bark and made a concotion that cured his mother, and she lived for any years.

demembers his first day at school at Coney. His father and other had taken him and a brother form to the school that day in a back, a staken went on to the store near agunitia and spent several hours there. They then went on ho and found their house burning beyond control. In those days the school term was only three months of the years beginning in february.

In the Ky Carlile family there were eight pays and three girls, the Cartile have been good and prominent citizens of the Cherokee action, and the mation is a better place for their naving lived here.
