

(Prickly pear?)

Yeah, that's what it is.

(How do you say that in Kiowa?)

Sa a lagoon. Sa a lagoon--long word, isn't it?

(Yeah.)

Sa a lagoon. I sure like that one. Sometimes they make them stickers right on the edge. If you don't clean them, they get in your mouth and, man, they make--they make ya--oh, I don't know what you call it. Gorge, hurt your tongue. They're sweet, some of them are awful sweet. Put down the white man name and then you--.

(Yeah, I did. What does the Kiowa name mean? Sa a lagoon?)

Cactus berries.

(How do you just say cactus?)

Sa.

(Sa?)

Sa. Sometimes, peyote's name is sa.

(Oh, really?)

It's not a cactus, but it's a family to it. But it's not a cactus.

But they call it sa, peyote.

(When is it that you can make this glue out of it?)

Anytime.

(Oh, really?)

Wintertime or summertime.

(Does it have to be red?)

Yeah, the berries. There's a, right on that where it's right on top, there's those berries. They're red. They've got a lot of seed in them.

(Is this the same berry that you eat?)
