

Turner, contracting officer Ft. Sill - (not clear) Hommely, from Cache Public School -- Earl Yeager from Ft. Sill Indian School -- Victor Palmer, Job Corps -- But Sahmaunt, Indian co-ordinator of this county -- (give us your title too) Ace Sahmaunt, Community Action Program -- So this you have heard is my field, you can tell from the way I talk, I feel pretty strongly about it and I would like to hear from some of you all as to what you think the possibilities are for something like this -- whether or not you want to get together and follow up an organization like this. I think is one of the things that we have to be concerned about is, getting all enthused and trying to come together a couple of times bating our heads against the wall and giving up. If we're gonna do this, I think probably we ought to just to forget about organizing. This is one of the things that interferes with all of these organizations at this time. We need some objectives and goals and want to decide just exactly what we want to do -- how we want to do it -- not only have one way, but have alternatives how we want to do this. And I believe -- we've got the intelligence and potential there that can accomplish quite a lot if we make up our mind to. This is _____ Blackerby, she works out at Ft. Sill in the finance division -- we just got through introducing ourselves here, so -- (background conversation) I think this pretty well covers what we had in mind. We said we would talk about this for a long time and we decided to quit talking and see what we could do, but the thing that I see in this kind of a organization is that it will give the Indian people I think a little bit of incentive in the fact that this organization will be someone that they can look and see that there is someone behind them rather than giving them instructions and then they can go their own way. Because you know as well as I do that for some reason, an Indian has to be prodded just a little and we feel like this is where we can help.
