

a minute ago would really help our Indian people. Also, most of the people that I have talked to in this county, since I began to work, have financial problems. And it's not the fact maybe, that they don't work, but it's just the fact that they aren't trained to the point that they can go out and get a high paying job that they are able to support their entire family. And in many cases, there are two and three families living under one roof and only one person working. And these types of families are making an effort. But due to the circumstances they are still not able to meet the needs--the children need, that the family needs. And these are areas that we might be able to go in and give some type of financial assistance to these people in order to get them through. Three problems that I hear more than anything are: not enough money to pay for the lunches at school. A lot of families haul their children out of school because they don't have enough money and rather than go and ask the school to let them eat until they are able to pay for it, they just keep their children out. Well, when we have severe cases of this, maybe we can go in and help the family through a financial crisis. We could have a fund raising campaign. We can even go as far as maybe donating a few dollars of our own to get started. Clothing is another problem. A lot of families say, well, he'll start to school next week, after I get him some clothes. Well at the looks of things, is that the child is getting hurt. He's the one that's taking the brunt of all these problems that a family has. And these are ways we can help the children. Education as far as I'm concerned is 75% maybe, of the answer to our problem. And we know that we can't educate the older people, but we can work as a group to help these people find a little bit better job, aid them, help them get through the crisis that you are having with their own children, get their children on their feet, help them through, maybe workbooks. I've
