

chief of the deer, oh maybe thousands of them. Well, the number they don't say, but anyhow, they all. And when they made their addresses. "I tell you what we gonna do." He says, "Now they might kill all of you, all of this generation. They might kill all of you," because they had them surrounded. The Indians, they surrounded them deers. They couldn't get out. So they sang a song. And so the chief says, "I want my mate, I want my wife," I guess he would call her. He says, "When you get through singing the song, I'm going to make a jump and I want you to follow me." So they sang that song, you know. Just when they get that chief, he made a sound (imitates sound of chief deer)--like that. He made a sound. He didn't holler (sound again)--just like that. So when he said that he made a jump. And he jump over the enemy. And then his mate, his wife, she made a sound and then she jumped. They says in the future now. He said, "You not going to kill all the deers," he says. "We're going to get away from ya'll. And there'll be some more deers in the future. So don't think that you're going to. Some of these might get away but if you kill all of them, we the ones gonna raise some more children. And we gonna have big company of deers all over the world." So that's where the deer when he jumped, throwed up his tail, it was white, you know. Well, that white means that we're saved. We're winned. If we win, this surrounding us and gonna kill us, but it says some spirit has made this plan for us to jump them. Jump over you and run. "You can't get us. So from now on we're going to raise childrens." So that's a deer story. That's not a Sainday but that's why Indians always say we got plenty deers. Because that deer got away from that enemies. And now there's deer all over. That's what those two I have.
