

Jenny: Yeah.

Cecil: That's dangerous. Probably make you blind. You go blind.
(What, the syphilis?)

Cecil: That syphilis. I've got a book in there that tell you all about it. These doctors--and I read up. And I know what I'm talking about. What's bad they claim, there's a vein full of blood that gets into the lung. And that's what causes pneumonia. And they take that and cut it. The doctors, the Indian doctors do. They doctor and take it out and you are all right.

(Oh, yeah. That's really interesting.)

Cecil: Well, you got pretty good story today.

(I sure did. How far away from your place is that white clay? Is is very far?)

Cecil: How far is it where we get that white clay? About three miles.

(Would it be too much trouble to go out there sometime and gather some?)

Cecil: No, it's on her father's lease. You have to dig it out. It's right on a big bank. It lays in there with the vines. I mean it's got a vein and that clay just plum white. I don't get no dirt mixed with it when I get it. I take a spoon or knife--cut it out good and get it.

(Would you have time to go out there today, you know, after we eat or do you feel like it?)

Cecil: I'll tell you what. You going to come back next week again.
(Yeah.)

Cecil: I tell you what. I have to go. I get some for you. I make it in a ball and get one loose.
