

they kind of in a bunch like that. They in a bunch like that and they bright. And they call them dāmátàn.

BEAR GIRL'S SISTER AND BROTHERS BECAME STAR GIRLS

(What?)

Jenny: Dāmátàn. Dá means "star". Star Girl--mátàn. Mátàn. Star Girl.

(Say it once more.)

Jenny: Dāmátàn.

(Dāmátàn.)

Jenny: Yeah, and they say that's the story.

(And they're sort of in a group of stars together?)

Jenny: Yeah, yeah. They're just kind of close together. Like they can't miss but see them. Course, they travel with the moon, you know. And that what he's talking about, the old mans are in a circle smoking a peace pipe--you can't miss them when them stars are bright. They in a circle like that. There's six or seven of them--bright stars.

(Jenny, this star girl and her brothers, now is that something you would see in the summertime?)

Jenny: Yeah.

(Well, if you were just going to go out around 10 or 11 o'clock at night in the summer and look up, about what part of the sky would they be in?)

Jenny: Oh, you know when the stars are up about morning, well, like first of the night, you see the stars always be kind of ahead of you, you know.

(Yeah.)

Jenny: And then towards morning, sometimes they move west. They
