

Jenny: 'And they say-when you do that, when they go to sleep, they really sleep a long time cause when they jump like that, they don't move. And they say a little baby, when you put him to sleep, you just lay him down. And when any noise, well, they jump and they wake themselves up. But the other way, they wrap them up and they sleep just so sound. They say that's when their back is straightened and their legs are straight. In a cradle, they say when you keep your baby in a cradle, the body is straight. They got straight backs and their legs are straight. But they all say now, you young generation, you carry your babies and make them stand up. That's why they're bow-legged. Their bones are too tender and you stand them up and that's why they get bow-legged.

(Well, that could be.)

MORE ABOUT STAR GIRLS

(Is there any name that they have for that rock that grew up?)

Jenny: Oh, they say now that rock is way--maybe he knows where it's at. It's still there. And you could see the nail scratch on that rock.

(Oh, really!)

Jenny: I don't know whether it's in this country or overseas. Cecil, you know that story--(speaks in Kiowa)

Cecil: That's at Montana, I guess. You can see that great rock. And when the bear was chasing them Star Girls, they ran up on that big glob or rock, you call it. You see the picture of it. And they all run up there and then when they run up there, that bear tried to get up there and you know, when he jump up there, he makes that mark on that rock. Well, that's falsehood.

Jenny: Yeah, there's someone said that's that tribe over there.
