

Jenny: And he was the leader of that clan. There was, I guess a family or the whole family of the Elk Clan. He was head man of that. (Is that different from the Gourd Clan?)

Jenny: Yeah, it's different. Yeah, yeah, that's a different thing from a Gourd. (speaks Kiowa) That's a different clan.

Cecil:— That's a different lodge. That other one's a Gourd Dance, Gourd Lodge. And this is Elk Lodge. It's not together. It's a different thing.

Jenny: But I'm telling her, I told her Grandpa Black Bear, Sétgóng'a was a leader of a Gourd Dancers too.

Cecil: He was leader in both lodges. In the Gourd Clan he was a leader in that. Black Bear was. And he was a leader in this other Oko.gui. He was a leader in both. And all together he was a leader. He's the one that carry the pipe, you know, when thirty of them are going on the warpath. There's a certain man that carries the pipe. And all of that thirty members of that Gourd Clan or the Oko.gui, they listen to this one man. He's a general. In other words, he's a general like the general here at Fort Sil. He plans everything. He tells them what to do. He's the one that carries the pipe. He's the only one that can carry that pipe. If they make a peace out there, he's the one to make peace. And if they get on the warpath and they want to stop, well, he's the one to say yes or no. And in other words, he's a general in that clan. In the Gourd Clan there's supposed to be maybe thirty or fifty men in that Gourd Clan. And over here in Oko.gui, it's the same way. They all go out together. Of course, he controls the whole two clans, the Gourd Clan and the Oko.gui--the Elk Lodge.

(Did he belong to the both at the same time?)