

(Yeah)

Where I was raised. She had--people go over there and just in droves and stay there. She was well off. What I mean is she had plenty. She raised stuff. She had a good farm. And anybody that went there was welcome. Stay there as long as you want. I know there's three or four fellows stayed there, year in and year out.

(Hum)

Yeah. They wouldn't do nothing unless they wanted to. She fed them and kept 'em there.

(My goodness.)

Yeah, she was (words not clear)

RUNNING STREAMS AND CREEKS - SMALL COMMUNITIES

(What is the name of that creek that runs east of you?)

You mean where I live now?

(Yeah)

That's Whitewater Creek.

(Whitewater Creek)

Where the bridge cross?

(Yeah.)

Yeah, that's Whitewater.

(Well that's a beautiful piece of water there.)

Oh, it sure is. And there's another little branch over there before you get to that bridge coming west. It's called the Sulphur branch.

(Uh-hum)

Yeah, it's a lot of water running down through there.

(That's a beautiful valley)

Yeah, it sure is. Yeah we own a farm right there. Before the dam took it. Water took it, my home. There's ninety acres and two-tenths acres in there. And twenty
