

(Now can you remember any of your other classmates, white or Indian?)

Marie: Oh, yes I remember...uh classmate Beulah Patterson was her name. She is Mrs. Cokeman today. And also her sister Birdie Patterson. She is Mrs. Wilson Drake today. And then another one I remember he name is Verna Housely. And lot more others but I guess them the ones I was close by that I could remember.

(How about J. C. Cornett?)

Oh, I remember one of the boys classmate was J. C. Cornett. At the time, we used to after school sometimes we used to stop in town and Mr. Cornett used to sell newspaper. That's what he did after school and through on Saturday and Sunday I guess. And Mr. Cornett is living today. And he is a lawyer at Pawhuska.

(What kind of recreation do you remember at the time?)

I don't remember any kind of recreation.

(You said you were playing basketball while ago?)

Oh, yes. At the--at the time at the school there. Well we used to play basketball. Out in the open. I don't know whether...I don't remember playing any team or not but I remember there was Indian girls played against the white girls. And I just don't remember who were the Indian girls. I knew there were Indian girls on one team.

(Is there any other kind of recreation that the young girls played at the time like in later years they had slides and such as that on the school ground, did they have any then at that time?)

Oh, yes. They have a swings and one that goes round and round. I don't know what they'd call it then. And some other sliding boards. Different kinds of places to I guess exercise and playing different ways. That's about all I can remember at that school.

(You don't remember any more Indian classmates?)

Yes, I remember. Now I think I could remember some of the Indian girls. But I can't just recall their name at present time.
