

(Who would do that?)

Well any of them. Didn't have to be special one.

(Well, I mean you get this group of forty people, someone's going to have to decide who's going to be on each side. I mean who does that? Two people choose or just the who's going to be on each side?)

I imagine the team do.

(Did they have...what I mean trying to say is that we all got together out there.

I remember that.. Now who selected each team. I don't remember that.)

Well, I imagine there's somebody to head but I didn't know.

(That's what I meant. I mean who chose each side. I'll take you and I'll take you. Who did that?)

Well, I don't remember the one that did that...Somebody did.

(And Uh but I wanted get around to there wasn't no certain team that had uh sometimes...like in modern times. A team that's got certain players. And they play each Sunday on same team. This wasn't true back there. You could be on one team ...I mean it depend on who chose you. That certain Sunday or how was it? Was there a group of players that always played together?)

I imagine they did.

(I don't remember that.)

I don't remember that part. But I think they each group stayed together.

(Kind of had a little team formed of people of their own. And again I must say ...it look like you and my dad must of had a team there.)

We must have, (much laughter);

(I mean you know..it sounded like the whole team or something like that. Course...)

There wasn't no other team ther but just what came out there. Then there's supposed to be two teams. The same people and sometimes different ones come.

(And sometimes they bring somebody along with them?)
