

(Yeah)

John Fallin died May the 10th, 1875.

(And how old was your grandfather, Gib?)

Forty-five years old.

(And here's another just a plain stone.)

I believe that's just an old stone.

(Yeah. It's unknown.)

This one I think just another stone.

(Yeah. Well so many of them were buried that way in the early days I guess. Couldn't afford a marker.)

That's right but some of them's got Cherokee writing, you know.

(Yeah)

On it.

(Uh-huh)

And I don't believe these tell who they are, is it.

(No, it's just a big, one piece slab, stone slab over the grave there.)

And they don't have no identification there at all. Now that Deal's girls would know who these are, I bet you.

(Yeah)

Then Frank might. We'll ask Frank Castor when we go back.

(Alright. Yeah he might remember--)

Yeah.

(And I've got a little plat of how they lay in here.)

Yeah. (Sentence not clear).

(Uh-huh. Bare Timpson was Sammy's.)

I believe he was. And I think, we'll ask Frank when we go back up there.

(Alright.)
