

PRESERVED FARM PRODUCTS

When the apples begin to get good. They get them. And they peel, and they slice them up. And you could just see them on top of the house. Probably you know how they did that.

(Yeah)

And beans. When they'd be cured. Cured out. Shell them. Set them in there. Place-they store them away for the winter.

(Well)

And raise their corn. And the hickory nuts we was talking about while ago. And they gather them up. And make Kanuchia to have in the winter. And then sweet potatoes. When you go inside of the house. I can remember you could smell them sweet potatoes scent right down under the floor. And they had a big place dug out, right under the house there. That's where they keep their sweet potatoes. Used to be you stand inside you could smell, sure smell good--smelt so good.

(Sure good smell to it.)

RAISED SHEEP - GRANDMOTHER MADE YARN TO MAKE CLOTHING

And there may be a few--. I know they buy a few clothing. Not too many. In the winter time my grandma used to yarn.

(Hum)

And she had a few sheep. I don't know just how many sheep. She raised her own sheep. And she got this wool from the sheep. And she work it out and clean them up and wash it up. And boy she'd have that wool as white as snow in no time.

(Well)

I don't know how she did it. Anyway she work it up. And when she get ready. Sit up that big old spinning wheel. Boy! Make that yarn you know. And I think
